SEMINAR DESCRIPTION

Would you like to work smarter, not harder? Before responding, consider this: It's one thing to make it easier to get through your to do's — all the emails, meetings, projects and people issues. It's altogether different to proactively head off the onslaught before it hits you! Would you like to go beyond finding easier ways for getting things done — to actually work smarter? This highly interactive workshop will focus on giving you that kind of control: First: How to make better choices in all that comes at you — ultimately, doing less to accomplish more. And then: How to create more value for everyone around you. (No one works smarter all by themselves.) Participants will examine the root causes of the overload (you own a lot more of that than you think you do!), and how to take back control, one day at a time. The tips, tools and next steps all come from years of researching how people just like you successfully managed their own workflow. But come prepared to be challenged. We will uncover and address your biggest limiting beliefs about control, time, workflow, getting everything done, and what truly matters.
