SEMINAR DESCRIPTION

You, or someone you are coaching, has just been promoted or appointed to a new managerial or leadership role. Do you offer your congratulations or your caution? Some call it the perils of promotion—or even hazardous duty. Whatever the term, when someone assumes a new or different leadership role today, he or she has about a 40% chance of either demonstrating disappointing performance, voluntarily leaving the role or being terminated within 12-18 months. Leaders often fall victim to the “newly appointed leader dilemma” because organizational expectations for results are higher than ever, but the patience to obtain these results is the lowest it’s ever been. In today’s treacherous environment, there are no honeymoon periods. This program is aimed at both new and experienced managers and leaders—from team and functional managers through more seasoned executives, as well as the coaches who work with these individuals. The program is designed to have immediate practical application. As a result of the program you will help ensure your success during the critical transition into a new leadership role, minimize common derailing factors and accelerate your learning curve. You will also practice and take away eleven tools and many additional ideas that you could begin to use tomorrow.

FACULTY

DR. EDWARD BETOF joined the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania in the summer of 2007 where he is the Senior Fellow and an Academic Director for the first-of-a-kind doctoral program at a major university designed for the preparation of Chief Learning Officers. Dr. Betof retired at the end of 2007 as Vice President, Talent Management and Chief Learning Officer at BD (Becton, Dickinson and Company), a 112-year-old global medical technology company. Dr. Betof had WW responsibility for Talent Management Processes including BD University, HR Planning/Leadership Development, Strategic Staffing, Performance and Development Process and for integrating the worldwide processes of Associate Engagement and Inclusion/Diversity. BDU has been externally cited as one of the outstanding examples in the corporate world of having successfully designed and implemented the "Leaders as Teachers" concept. In 2007 BD finished in the top five of all worldwide submissions for ASTD's BEST Award and was identified in 2004 by Accenture Consulting as one of 28 out of almost 300 companies as a "High Performance Learning Organization". Dr. Betof previously held senior functional leadership roles at Hoffmann-LaRoche and the Reliance Insurance Companies. Dr. Betof was Senior Vice President of Manchester Consulting where he created the "Newly Appointed Leader Coaching" process and co-led the leadership development practice. Dr. Betof has held adjunct faculty appointments at the Center for Creative Leadership, Penn State University, Temple University and was a visiting lecturer in high performance leadership for second year MBA students at Columbia School of Business. He is the author of Leaders as Teachers (ASTD Press and Berrett-Koehler) and lead author of Just Promoted! (McGraw-Hill). He has contributed to numerous journals and professional publications. Dr. Betof received his Doctoral degree from Temple University in 1976.
